Enriching the Providence and Rhode Island Community

The new Medical School building has 134,000 square feet, including:

- classrooms, auditoriums, and anatomy suite space - approximately 36,000 square feet
- student space - 17,725 square feet
- office space - 7,500 square feet
- common space - 4,300 square feet
- public café - 1,700 square feet

Alpert Medical School spurs the redevelopment of the Knowledge District to a higher level by bringing capital investments, a burgeoning economic industry, and foot traffic to the neighborhood.

The Alpert Medical School’s investment in the area will benefit all, both through the installment of a café and airy atrium that will be open to the public, as well as through an improved pedestrian environment in the form of parks and green spaces.

As a commitment to the future of our environment and a healthier Rhode Island for years to come, the new Medical School building has been built to the Gold standard of LEED® certification, thanks to its energy efficiency, reuse of an existing urban structure, and indoor environmental quality.

It serves as an exciting new venue for public lectures on health and medicine-related topics, including events that support the continuing medical education of health care professionals throughout Rhode Island, as well as national CME conferences.
